SELECT COLOR WITH CONFIDENCE

By Eileen Roche

The easiest way to select thread color is to start with the printed fabric, find a coordinating solid and then determine the thread. For instance, I spotted this floral blouse in a retail store.

I fell in love with the flowers and immediately thought of pairing it with a denim jacket.

Here's how to select coordinating thread. Audition spools right on the blouse and grab your phone to document the process as you switch out spools.

Next, review the photos to see what composition is the most pleasing. Once you're satisfied with the combination, move the spools to the denim jacket.

Denim is one of the trickiest fabrics to select thread for because it's a mixture of light, medium and dark threads. What you think will contrast with denim often blends too well and leaves the embroidery looking lackluster. The colors may be beautiful, but the value (the lightness and darkness of the color) may be too close to the denim's value making the embroidery almost invisible from a 6 ft. distance.

To avoid that result, use a value finder. A value finder is a piece of translucent red or green plastic or glass. When you peer through the colored plastic, all color is removed from the object. What remains is the value of the fabric and threads.

Look through the red panel to view threads right on the fabric.

If they are the same value as the fabric, you'll know you must find a lighter or darker thread if you want the embroidery to pop off (or separate from) the fabric.

I trust the value finder more than I trust my own eye. Because I tend to fall in love with a color, I try to force it on the fabric. Every time I override the value finder, I'm disappointed with the result.

Purchased Fabric

The selvedge of a cotton quilting fabric is a helpful design tool. The dots on the selvedge are thumbnails of the inks the mill used to print the fabric.

The number of dots is the number of screens used in the printing process. Some fabrics are more complex than others and have up to 17 dots (or screens). Regardless of the number of screens, the selvedge is a handy device in selecting threads. And when shopping for threads, just snip the selvedge off the fabric and throw it in your handbag.

Fold the strip at the dot and place the dot next to the spool to find a match. Do this for each dot.

Once you have matched the fabric to the thread, audition the threads on the fabric.

Most likely you'll stitch on a coordinating plain fabric so check the value of the threads on that fabric. You'll have confidence the embroidery will look lovely when paired with the patterned fabric.

Threads are made from high quality raw materials, free from carcinogens and banned AZO dyestuffs. Our thread is knotless, resulting in improved production efficiency.

- Made from bright, high tenacity polyester trilobal filament
- High tensile strength
- Brilliant sheen
- High color fastness to chlorine and soda
- Coated with special chemicals to make the thread smoother
- Suitable for high-speed computerized embroidery machines
- 40 weight, 120/2 denier thread
- 1,000 (1,100 yards) and 5,000 (5,500 yards) meter spools
- Easy Snap Spool on 1,000 meter spools
